

The Disability Strategy

Building a better system

We aspire to build an education system in which children with disability thrive academically, develop good physical, mental and emotional health, and gain the skills to live a fulfilling, independent life post-school.

Investing in teachers and other support staff

Our new Disability Strategy will on reforms to:

- Build on suite of core, advanced and specialist professional learning.
- Provide funding support for qualified candidates to pursue additional specialist studies
- Train school and departmental leaders in evidence-based approaches to support students with disability

The Disability Strategy

Enabling schools to operate with more flexibility

One-size-fits-all-models don't work to deliver the best outcomes for children with disability.

Our new disability strategy will work on reforms to:

- Provide more resources and a resourcing model that allows individual student needs to be met
- Share success stories and improve connections between schools and families of children with similar needs

The Disability Strategy

Making the family experience better and easier

The families of children with disability are often faced with incredible pressures.

Our new disability strategy will work on reforms to:

- Make experiences transparent and straightforward
- Improve systems to act on concerns or complaints quickly
- Provide consistent support for families and schools during periods of change

The Disability Strategy

Improving outcomes for all students

We're serious about success, which is why we're committed to building an evidence base against which we will evaluate our progress.

Our new Disability Strategy will work on reforms to:

- Improve measures and track outcomes around all students' learning growth, wellbeing (physical, emotional and mental) and independence at regular intervals.
- invest in research to understand shifts in disability types and identify what practices support the best outcomes.
